

PUBLISHER'S NOTE 20 Bay Area party people. BY SCOT BONDLOW

LETTERS 22 The blooming of Bayview.

CONTRIBUTORS 26 The people behind the stories.

START 34 The gory details. BY BRUCE KELLEY

DEPARTMENTS

CLICK 36 From women in white to an old SFO terminal exiting the gate, the month's best photographs.
PHOTOGRAPHS BY DREW ALTIZER, EMMANUEL CANTERAS, AND TROY PAIVA

THE TALK 43 August, on a need-to-know basis. What's new, what matters, what's next, including:

MUSIC 48 One fest, two fest, small fest, huge fest. The summer music circuit's main events.

DESIGN 50 Hey, little sister. Crate & Barrel gets a wee bit edgy with its Ellis Street spinoff, CB2.

MEDIA 52 The next big charity: news. Extra! Extra! Journalism just might be the latest nonprofit cause.

GREEN 54 Bags reborn. The new way to tote groceries is in your old raincoat.

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK 56 So open it hurts. Tara Hunt and Chris Messina, the Brangelina of Web 2.0, blogged and twittered about their romance as if it were one of their dreamy open-source projects. Then they broke up. BY BERNICE YEUNG

NIGHT WATCH 70 Punch-drunk love. A lost classic San Francisco cocktail reemerges with a kick. BY CAMPER ENGLISH

TECHNOLOGY

“Steve Jobs eventually will get old... I like our chances.”

In an interview in the Financial Times, Verizon CEO IVAN SEIDENBERG relates his plan for his company's domination of the mobile Internet market. Bloggers quickly began debating whether Seidenberg meant that he's waiting for the iPhone's mastermind to go out of fashion—or to expire.

GREEN

Bags reborn

Now that plastic bags are verboten in San Francisco, it seems like every market, café, and shop is passing out logo-smeared shopping bags to take their place. Kendra Stanley, of City Bag Trade, has another idea: She reclaims old rain jackets and turns them into totes. Stanley offers these bags for sale on her website, or you can send in your retired camp slicker and she'll make a personalized bag in one of two sizes. In keeping with the open-source spirit at the core of contemporary DIY, Stanley also offers a pattern on her site for anyone ready to join the cause. ■

CITYBAGTRADE.COM

NIGHTLIFE

Tight-lipped and raring to go

If you're a San Francisco nightclub owner, business is definitely good when rapper Mos Def is rockin' your mic and comedian Dave Chappelle is ordering drinks from your bar. It also doesn't hurt when their visit comes as a complete surprise. Since its remodel and reopening in March, 330 Ritch has been posting last-minute shows not only by renowned performers like Mos Def (below, on the night in question), but also by world-class DJs like Steve Aoki and DJ AM. Mos Def was in town, kicking it with comedy king Chappelle, when he decided to extend his stay in San Francisco. Of course, it's hard to make it to these shows when they're not announced until the morning of. But if you sign up for 330 Ritch's mailing list, you can get the 411 on the club's unexpected visitors. Or don't—it was pretty cool hanging with Chappelle without the rest of the city screaming, “I'm Rick James, bitch!”

■ MATT BLOOM 360 RITCH ST., SF, 415-902-3125, 330RITCH.COM

CONTRIBUTORS: JESSICA KELMON, GINA KESSLER, AND JAN NEWBERRY